From the Pastor's Desk....

There is no such thing as a good disability. It is an inane question to pose, which disability causes the greatest limitations or difficulties for the person so weighed down by one. Physical blindness, however, represents only one aspect of the darkness some people live in. In the Gospel, Jesus healed the blind on several different occasions. There is always reference, however, to blindness which kills the spirit and compassion of people. Far many more people suffer some form of spiritual blindness than would admit.

Which is worse, to be blind to the panorama of light and color that is the physical world, or to be blind to one's own failings and the misery of others? Does the greater disability lie in feeling or tapping one's way through the world, or displaying bold indifference to the pain and injustice found all around us? Is it a greater personal evil to be unable to see the lights go on at night in the city or to fail to see the suffering caused by war, poverty, or sickness as something I am called to act upon?

Lent calls us to make a personal journey out of the darkness that engulfs our lives to live every day with eyes wide open. In today's Gospel, Jesus rejected the popular notion that any physical disability comes as the result of personal sin. But it is personal sin which blinds us to our faults, our real needs, and the genuine needs of others. During Lent, we call upon God to heal our personal blindness, even if we possess 20-20 vision. During Lent, we want to learn anew how to walk as sons and daughters of light. It is the only way we can find the difficult way through this world back to God.

Have a good week,
Fr. Bill Arnold
